

Randi Becker ATR-BC

I currently work under Lisa Meyers as I pursue LCMHC (but would be so grateful to simply remain an art therapist - I am in my last months of my 5 years) I work as an art therapist in Burlington. - Smith Elementary, Hunt Middle School and Burlington High School.

Carolyn Crotty ATR, LCMHC

I am a registered art therapist and have my LCMHC in the state of Vermont as well as my LMHC in the state of Massachusetts. I have a private practice of 12-18 clients, mostly adults across Vermont and some in Massachusetts, via telehealth who are looking to address issues of anxiety, trauma, depression, body image issues, stage of life changes and adjustment to life events. I also am contracted with the Center for Trauma Recovery in Essex to provide a weekly telehealth art therapy group for their IOP program for women with dual diagnoses of substance use and trauma. I additionally supervise providers working toward licensure (art therapists and non-art therapists).

I struggled to get my LCMHC in Vermont due to the lack of reciprocity between Massachusetts and Vermont counseling requirements. I was required by Vermont to take additional course work and an additional counseling exam even after graduating from a 60 credit nationally accredited counseling/art therapy program in Massachusetts and acquiring my license in that state. If licensure for Art Therapy in Vermont had been available I likely wouldn't have bothered jumping through the hoops for the LCMHC (though I certainly would've kept my LMHC in Massachusetts, as I continue to do so now).

Molly German ATR, LCMHC

I'm in private practice in Bristol. I see adolescents and adults for both art therapy and psychotherapy. I also do group art therapy work with an organization that supports families affected by cancer.

I will be taking my ATR-BC exam next week and most likely have that credential then.

I have been working with other art therapists in an antiracist book club for the past year and a half and we just proposed for the upcoming AATA conference to hopefully represent and discuss our antiracist work we have been doing together through reflection art and open discussion.

Lynn Butler-Dube ATR-BC LCMHC,

I work been working at the Adams Center for Mind and Body full time for 17 years and have had private practice working at an elementary school for 11 years.

At the Adams Center I meet with complex clients who may be presenting with multiple diagnoses such as: eating disorders, PTSD, depression, bi-polar, borderline personality disorders, substance use disorders.

At the Brewster Pierce Memorial School, Huntington, VT (pre-k to 4 grade, I meet with students who are dealing with trauma and behavioral struggles that effect their social , emotional and academic development.

I am an art therapist registered and board certified, license mental health and drug /alcohol counselor. In June 2023 I am planning to be in private practice full time at the Associates at the Gables in Williston, VT

Melissa Daltry ATR LCMHC

Since 2015, I have worked as a licensed clinical mental health counselor and registered art therapist in my part-time private practice. Currently, my private practice consists of three domains. Firstly, I provide in-person psychotherapy services to children between the ages of 5 and 11 years old who are students at the Integrated Arts Academy (IAA.) IAA is a magnet school in the Burlington School District. My young clients at IAA are working on treatment goals associated with anxiety and mood disorders, attention & concentration disorders, trauma exposure, learning challenges, family stressors such as divorce/separation/loss, social behavior issues, family system substance addiction, and post-adoptive issues. Goals are similar for the adolescents and middle-school age clients whom I see by telehealth, which is the second domain of my private practice. Many of my adolescent clients are also seeking skills to help them cope with the stress of overwhelming academic demands, societal unrest, and phase of life problems, that mutually influence their anxiety and mood disorders. This domain of my private practice is in transition. Most of my telehealth clients live in Chittenden County, where I am also located. Finally, a small portion of my private practice is contract work with UVM Health Network Home Health & Hospice Pediatric Palliative Care Program. My clientele live in Chittenden County and the work is usually within the family home engaging pediatric patients and/or their siblings. This is a specific contract for expressive therapy services.
